LOCAL BUSINESS WINS NATIONAL AWARD

An oil distribution company based in Bicester has just scooped a national award, recognising high levels of excellence in the oil heating and cooking sector.

Nolan Fuel Oils Ltd. was named Oil Distributor of the Year at the Oil Firing Technical Association (OFTEC) Awards for Excellence held in London at the Hotel Russell. The company beat off stiff competition throughout the UK and Ireland to win.

Company representative Mark Nolan said: "This is the third year we have won and it is fantastic to win again. The award is a quality mark from OFTEC and it means that we are meeting the expected standards in the industry. We are constantly upgrading our standards and being a small independent company, we've got our finger on the button and that is reflected in the award. "

Mark was presented with a trophy at a black tie gala dinner, in front of over 200 guests by Richard Marsh from Atlas Tanks, who sponsored the award. The event takes place every year and recognises key achievements in the oil heating industry.

Over 1.6 million homes across the UK and Ireland use oil for heating and cooking, many of them in rural areas which do not have access to mains gas.

There are over 9,500 OFTEC registered technicians and businesses throughout the UK and Ireland. As well as being qualified and insured to work in your home, OFTEC registered technicians can advise on energy efficiency measures which could help reduce fuel bills. A list of OFTEC registered technicians can be found at www.oftec.org
